Banter is a dating app that really tries to use the "blind-dating" approach with a reveal feature where the users match based on interests and personality and then talk over chat and voice chat to really get interested in each other until they really feel like they want to unlock video chat and/or pictures allowing you not to base all your swipes on lust and superficiality and to find the humanity in ourselves in order to find the best partner for a loving long term relationship that is give and take!

Users of dating apps aren't interested in tinder and bumble because it is all based first and foremost on looks, whereas talking on chat mode first and matching based on common interests is a way to get closer to someone, the app then reveals new options to see more about each other when both parties have decided they are curious to actually meet the person. Of course they must have good banter ;).
